NetApp, the data authority for hybrid cloud world, presented Arrow Electronics with the Distributor of the Year Award during its EMEA Partner Executive Forum (PEF) in Spain. Arrow received the award for demonstrating outstanding performance, innovation, service quality and growth with NetApp.

“The world of data is being propelled into the future with technologies such as 5G networks, AI heuristics, and billions of connected devices that form the Internet of Things”, said Kristian Kerr, vice president partners and pathways EMEA at NetApp. “Our Data Fabric strategy and our solutions for cloud-connected flash and hybrid-cloud infrastructures are key differentiators here. But without a doubt the partners turn technology into innovation, supporting our joint customers as they develop and launch new cloud-enabled business models.”

“We look forward to another year of collaboration with NetApp, empowering value-added resellers to build a strong cloud data, artificial intelligence and machine-learning technology and services economy”, said Alexis Brabant, vice president sales EMEA for Arrow’s enterprise computing solutions business. “Hand in hand we enable our channel customers to serve their customers’ future-proof infrastructures and to accelerate their growth with recurring revenue opportunities.”
